There's an old story about a little orphaned boy who lived with various relatives who beat and half starved him. The greatest delight of his life was to walk the streets during the Christmas season and look at the beautiful, wonderful Christmas toys displayed in the store windows. He knew that he would never have such toys and couldn't even touch them as there was always a glass barrier in between.

One day as he was crossing the street, he was struck by a car and was taken to the hospital. It was Christmas week and to his surprise he saw other children playing with toys they had received for Christmas. Soon, he sat up in his bed, and was overwhelmed to find a number of toys and presents left for him.

Hardly able to believe his eyes....he stretched forth his hands and said, "There's no glass between!"

Sin is the barrier that Christ removed with His coming to earth. Nothing between!
